

Lestenka: conflicts between parents and children: how to solve?

essaydoc

Guest Post to Ksenia Nestutin about positive education, published last week, caused a lively discussion, in which mothers-bloggers expressed their attitude to John Gray recommendations regarding the decision of the conflict in a pair of a parent-child.

Most mothers perceived the method of time awesome, to put it mildly, in the bayonets, and concluded about the need to share with each other other possible methods for solving conflict situations.

That is what we suggest you to do in today's forest. So how to solve conflicts with children? (First of all, we are talking about babies aged 2-4 years, but if you have such experience with older children, please share it too).

How to participate in the game Lestenka-Wonderland?

1. We ask the topic for discussion associated with blogs or parents. Today on the agenda, the question: conflicts between parents and children: how to solve?
2. You are briefly replied using the comment form and leave a link to one of your posts or to record in a friendly blog.
3. Then go on the link left by the previous commentator.
4. Comment on the post that the previous participant told, and do not forget to write:

Monday - Merry Day for Mom's blogs!

Or just mention that you came from the community "Mom blogs" - how it will seem most appropriate to you.

5. Accordingly, the one who will comment immediately after you, clicks on your link and comments on your entry or post of your friend.

Source Illustration: Babble